From the interesting notification by the

Prefect of Canton, of which we gave a translation on Monday, it would appear that at last the Chinese Authorities are taking steps in good earnest to make the people at large better acquainted with foreigners, and more tolerant towards them. Knowing as we do what great adopts the Chinese are at saying or writing one thing, which in reality means another, we may be pardoned feeling that there are here and there little expressions which may perhaps hardly seem to be com--- plimentary. The careful manner in which the people are enjoined to behave themselves they are to behave before they go out to a party, seems somewhat grotesque, but perhaps no great departure from the ordinary rule among the Chinese of treating the people at large as a set of children. However, China is now to put on her best be-_haviour. The people are to treat foreigners. as host and guest, to be polite and courteous, the signatures of parties who have contributed and not to entertain the least feeling of disc- sums of money to the imposter who held it respect. This will be a great advance upon the old state of things, if it is only fairly to his native place, making all the lame excuses acted up to. That the notification is meant | which only a Chinaman can make, whether to be bona fide, there seems to be very little | young or grey haired, stating he had no money. doubt, and it is satisfactory that the Pekin his passage home, whon last Monday be presented Authorities have so readily taken Mr. Wade's himself again, naturally thinking Europeans are hint that it is their fault that the masses in China are so ignorant, and that the cause of the greater portion of the troubles which cordingly placed his name on the charge-sheet, arise is simply that the nation at large has and he was brought before Mr. F. W. Mitchell never been informed of the status and rights accorded to foreigners under the treaty. At ment to the charge-room. last the officials appear to be gaining sufficient courage to let the truth be known; and if they continue this policy, the best results may be looked for. It may be said that we are only now beginning to have relations in any fair sense of the word with China as a nation. So long as the treaty stipulations were hushed up, and all that had been done was kept a secret, we had relations with the Mandarins, but not with the nation. By the large masses we were looked upon as intruders, and were supposed to consist of only two classes-Missionaries and pirates, The idea that there were a large number of respectable foreigners engaged in an extensive and beneficial trade, was not dreamed of by people a hundred miles away from the treaty ports. Occasionally they saw foreign. ers, but could only understand them to be mere stragglers, men wandening about without any fired occupation, abode, or responsibility. As years, however, have gone on, this idea has been gradually dissipated, and large numbers are beginning to understand that it is possible for a man to have red hair in place of black, and still not be exactly a devil. There is, in fact, hope, that our relations with China are as it were working their own way that is, that time and better ac-"quaintance on both sides will lessen the barriers which have bitherto separated the Chinaman and the foreigner, and cause a better understanding to arise between Whether this result can be brought about must of course depend very much upon the action of the official classes. It is for damages against Wong-a-foon, for a wilful no doubt within their power to give the cue, which will be in a great measure followed; Mr. F. W. Mitchell was in attendance, but Mr. and it is, therefore, satisfactory to find them | Wotton, counsel for the defendants, did not apat last displaying the moral courage to inculcate reasonable and fair behaviour on the

> The following from this morning's Times graphically displays how the present batch of H. M.'s advisers are getting on. In the House of Commons at the commencement of business last night there was the largest attendance seen this Session. Nothing like such a crowd has been present before since Parliament opened. Every seat was occupied, and the galleries were filled with members who, not ambitious of speaking, had gone aloft to survey the encounter of the gods below. Everybody who could bad come, and they were not unrewarded. The point at issue was practically the acceptance or rejection of an addition Mr. Leatham had proposed to insert in the Bill, making a voter liable to three months' imprisonment, with hard labour, if during the process of polling he should wilfully display his Brifish justice, and causes a current of public voting-paper so as to show whose name he had marked. On Monday night the Government had Then there is an ugly feature regarding those adopted Mr. Leatham's Amendmentas their own. andMr. Vernon Harcourt had succeeded by a majority of one in expunging from it the word The question of yesterday was, in effect, whether this Amendment should be reversed or should be carried further. The Ministry threw themselves into the contest with as much ardour as if the bantling they had adopted had been their own flesh and blood. The Opposition, on the other side, mustered strong and factious; but more termidable than their numbers was it that from behind the Treasury Bench rose, one after another representative men of the greatest authority to aunounce their intention of voting against Mr. Leatham's foundling. Two hours passed in speeches, for counter-cheered by friends and foes; and then a Division was taken, and it was seen that the Government had been besten on their own issue in a House of 520 by a majority of 23! A roar of enthusiasm greeted the aunouncement, and rabjee's godown at Wanobi to weigh rice, when it died away, Mr. Osborne asked, with sad gravity, whether the Government meant

For a misdeon bail-but on a charge of felony the question of bail rests at the discretion of the Court which is to try the case. Now, when Chief-Justice Bovill committed the man for perjury, the crime of forgery was involved and embraced in the charge, inasmuch as it consists in the signature to the Tichborne bonds. It is simply a question of identity and if he committed perjury in swearing he is Roger Tichberne, he of course committed forgery in signing Roger name. The Chief-Justice fixed the bail £5.000-half on the prisoner's own security, and half on two good names. However, so strict were the Judges, that no one's name would be taken who would not submit to an exposure of his wordly affairs, and the consequence was that by an unusual course the accused was kept in Newgate. Then the Attorney-General filed an indictment charging the prisoner with both furgery and perjury, and or this indictment the Grand Jury returned true bill. Then the Attorney General on b own motion had the case moved from the Central Criminal Court to the Court of Queen's Bench, which refused the application for bail The business of this Court is so much in arrear that the case is not likely to be tried this year. It is clear that the charge of forgery cannot be proceeded with-firstly, because no writter evidence can be used, and secondly, because the jury would have to be locked up during the entire period of the trial. (Daily News.) THURSDAY, April Hth. Our Paris Correspondent says that M. Thiers did not sleep in Paris on Monday night after his reception at the Elysée, but returned to Versailles by the theatre train at half-past twelve o'clock. The Bien Public, the organ of the Government, thinks that the reception will produce an excellent effect in France and abroad, and says that it must not be regarded as a demonstration of hostility to the Assembly. It is simply a wise administrative act, and Conservatives ought to see in what is occurring an important guarantee of security, not a course other stocks nothing doing.

(Daily-News.) FRIDAY, April 12th. Mr. Morley, M.P.; yesterday presided over a meeting of City merchants, called to consider. the means proposed to be adopted by the promoters of the Mid-London Railway Bill for securing the early construction of new thoroughfores in the City. Resolutions were adopted generally approving the scheme before the meeting, and a Committee was appointed to confer with the railway company respecting the interests of the tradesmen whose businesses will be affected by the suggested changes.

A special telegram by Atlantic Cable from our Correspondent in New York announces that a resolution has been brought forward in the House of Representatives, and referred to the Committee for Foreign Affairs, declaring that the claims for indirect damages are contrury to the meaning of the Washington Treaty, and should be waived if an amicable settlement can be arrived at of the matters in dispute. Our Paris Correspondent in referring to M. Gambetta's speech at Angera, says that the speaker was evidently embarrassed by the desire to say nothing inconsistent with his position as the leader of the extreme Radical party, and his desire to support M. Thiere as the only ropresentative just now of Republicanism. Our Berlin Correspondent, referring to the expression of confidence in the maintenance of peace contained in the Speech from the Throne read by Prince Bismarck on Monday Inst. says that should France attempt to re-establish the temporal power in Italy, Germany, it is generally assumed, will go to war to prevent her from doing so. Several Carlists escaped into French territory, who were at once disarmed and interned by the authorities. A

Carlist colonel was arrested. Further hearing of the Galway election petition took place at Galway. Besides other tastimony, it transpired that Father Ooben, having been informed that some persons insinuated the priests might use the confessional for influencing electors replied, "So they would, did they find the people committing, or about to commit, a sin by voting for a bad man." The editor of the Tuam News deposed that he left out portions of a speech made by Father Conway, the insertion of which would, he considered, have injured his paper. M. le Comte d'Epineull, having twice met his breditors, without a trustee being appointed, in consequence of the non-attendance of a quorum, appeared in the Bankruptcy Court; the question being whether, under such circumstances. the bankruptcy should proceed or be annulled. It was represented that the bankrupt had recently made an eligible marriage, and also hoped to obtain a Government appointment of considerable value. Under these circumstances, the case was adjourned, the interim trustee being allowed opportunity to make full inquiries in the interval.

ENGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION. ... An Anglo-Crinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

L this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compolled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are bere given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not Sole Agents for:

Associations of the Thumes. is better than the Rhone or Rhine.

Though deep yet clear, though gentle yet not Strong without rage, without o'erflowing full. Of how few rivers, barring the compliment to its clearness, can you say that so truly as of the Thames? It is the river that so exactly. suited our poets of the eighteenth century, who had little taste or love for fierce emotion or-horribly grand scenery, but loved the woods and the waters, the well-ordered loveliness of our garden-counties, the soft murmurs and tranquil reaches of the imperia river.—The historical associations of our river, the memories of our great men who haunted its shores, or perhaps sung its praises, are as numerous and as fruitful as those of any other stream; and though we have not the ruined castles of the Rhine, we have palace and tower, and countless homes, the fairest and best ordered in the world, which to my mind are still better. To me there. is something peculiarly bright and soothing about the varied aspects of our home river. I remember once, when, amid long wanderings in towns, the thought of the Thames would come to me with peculiar brightness and power. There I should be literally by green pastures and still waters. I will moor a boat beneath the trees, I thought, and be hushed by the melody of swaying boughs, -and-for hours-idly pull along the woods There was balm in the very thought; and, going to a quiet fishing village, as is now my wont, I spent the whole of the livelong spring -- lax, when the lights and colours are most vivid of all, floating on the Thames, storing up rest and energy for London work. This is Chiswick, only five miles from Hyde Park Corner, and the huge city is stretching out its wide, far-reaching arms, as if to overtake Chiswick is peculiarly associated with great and brilliant. memories. If I were writing a chapter on churchyards. I think I might meditate long in Chiswick church bair short, and assumes black paint, repaired village churchyard that has such a numero and illustrious tenantry. And in the church itself you may rove about amid monuments and brasses. Many are the premories belonging to Chiswick; and as a bookish man have a grateful memory for those neat, crisp books that issued from the Chiswick press, when we hardly had a better printer than old Whittingham. But Chiswick has a fund of memories of all kinds. Here long lived the parents of Alexander Pope, the poet. Pope might almost be called the Laurente of the Thames, unless indeed the title should be claimed by James Thomson: the author of "The Seasons." This is the house where Hogarth, the painter, lived soyourself better in some distinct way."many years; it seems large, but is not so large Chambers's Journal. as itseems, being but narrow. Here he brought his wife. It the most magnificent of dukes, gave to the Queen, Prince Albert, and the Emperor Nicholas in the very palmiest days of the Victorian Court I-promise vou there was hot to last," every one near me said. And sparkle and glitter enough, and the description reads like a page borrowed from the Arabian Nights. And we have lost our "blameless prince," and Czar Nicholas went to war with us, and died our foe, and our Court has never again been what it once was. Such things has time wrought. And there are, in especial, two stately sorrowful memories connected with this famous villa. Two famous Premiers have died here. After many years Charles James Fox became Prints Minister, though not holding the office of First Lord of the Treasury. There was a young nobleman who one day observed him stooping his shoulders in a peculiar manner. and who thought to himself, "that was just the way in which my father stooned before he sickened of the dropsy and died." Canning had only been Premier a few months, and the great prize seemed to vanish from his grasp. Many of his great political friends, whose cooperation seemed absolutely essential to him, had refused to join him, and -anxieties-and care weighed heavily on his sensitive temperament. He had to attend · the Duke of York's funeral at St. George's Chapel, Windsor, and there caught cold which his enfeebled constitution was little able to withstand. They brought him to Chiswick, and he was not able to leave, as inflammation of the lungs had set in. Prime Minister was not lodged in any stately way, it was but a little room looking into a sort of yard; there were a few books on the shelf, and a small gilt clock on the mantelpiece. Canning suffered greatly, a faithful physician told him of his danger, and he was not without good hope. However dissimilar in character and policy Fox and Canning may have been, they resembled each other in their eloquence, their genius, singular lot that thus brings them both to

"Hussars, mount!" from the colonel. We were in our saddles in a moment. The next orders brought us into the open ground from behind the cover where we had been concealed, and there facing us when we had formed line were the French. It was asplendid cuirassier regiment, coming forward at a walk, from being obliged to break their ranks to pass their own guns. A martial set of fellows they were, truly, all steel and hair their fierce faces were half covered with hair and horse hair streamed down their backs from their helmets, like the style adopted by young ladies at the present day. They were mounted upon powerful, large-boned horses. I should judge that we were about fifty yards distance from them.
